Adds

This should be incorporated at the point where closing down veterans hospitals and cutting back on their educational facilties are mentioned. It should also include a reference to how Nixon reacted when Sarah McClendon raised this question at his press conference in 3/74. Actually, just before that press conference, TV was full of upaid vets who were being forced to drop out of college simply because they had not gotten their checks in months and because the VA did nothing to produce the checks. The entire administration had been entirely unresponsivle to the problems it made for thise vets. Aside from day to day problems, they were losing if not their educa ions, then a full semester, with all that means to them in time, money and futures